SINO-NORDIC SECURITY RESEARCH WORKSHOP

Time: 21-22 October 2015

Venue: Fudan University

School of International Relations and Public Affairs | Fudan University
Department of Political Science | University of Copenhagen
Fudan Nordic Center
Fudan-European Centre for China Studies

One of the greatest challenges of our time remains how to make security - pursue freedom from threats in an anarchic international system. The concept of security, however, has been enormously multifaceted and has been defined differently by different schools of thought. In particular, it has been revisited and contested in the context of many new security challenges, risks and threats that are associated with growing complexity of post-Cold War international political order.

Sino-Nordic Security Research Workshop aims at promoting cutting-edge research on international security by bringing together Chinese and Nordic expertise. This workshop will give an overview of the state of the art of security research and address key agendas that future theories should tackle. We encourage theory-informed analysis on the perennial security problems as well as particular security challenges facing Europe and Asia.

This one-and-a-half day workshop features keynote lecture and paper presentations. The workshop will be the official launch of a series of research cooperation in political science discipline that Fudan and UCPH have planned to develop in the coming years. It also serves as a program celebrating the 20th Anniversary of Fudan Nordic Center.
